While it is well established that one or more forms of drug use are prevalent in patients with psychiatric disorders, it is not clear if this is a singular behavior, or a pattern of use.

A survey of narcotic and psychotropic drug utilization was conducted on a sample of patients admitted to a psychiatric day treatment program. Ninety-eight percent of patients reported drug use within the past year. Narcotics were the most frequently used drugs (82%). Only 28% of narcotic abusers had ever been in a drug abuse program and only 14% had completed one. Alcohol was the next most frequently used drug (60%), followed by stimulant drugs (26%), anxiolytic (19%), and depressant (9%) drugs. In a multivariate analysis of the demographic and diagnostic correlates of narcotic abuse, only a history of using stimulants or depressant drugs were significantly associated with an increased risk for narcotic abuse. The implications of these findings are discussed in terms of treatment issues and the need for a more detailed examination of the interaction of substance use disorders and psychiatric disorders. I think you mean  $F_x^{(p)}(t)$  in the small  $\epsilon$  domain, not  $F_x(t)$  as you defined. Also, please go back and revise your boundary conditions again. - Axel

Jul 15 '12 at 20:01  $F_x(t)$  is velocity of particle x at time t. Because the forces are normal distribution we can assume that's a gaussian function. Thanks Axel. - user8606 Jul 15 '12 at 20:06 2
